Statutory Authority for Rulemaking

State law authorizes the Board of Environmental Protection (Board) to adopt, amend or repeal those rules of the Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) that have been designated as major substantive rules by the Legislature pursuant to Title 5, chapter 375, subchapter 2-A. The Board may also adopt, amend or repeal routine technical rules as necessary for the conduct of the Board's business, including the processing of applications, the conduct of hearings and other administrative matters. (38 M.R.S. § 341-H). Rulemaking is governed by the Maine Administrative Procedure Act (MAPA), 5 M.R.S. §§ 8051-8074 and the Department's statutes.

What is a rule?

The Maine Administrative Procedure Act (MAPA) defines a rule as “[t]he whole or any part of every regulation, standard, code, statement of policy, or other agency statement of general applicability, including the amendment, suspension or repeal of any prior rule, that is or is intended to be judicially enforceable and implements, interprets, or makes specific, the law administered by the agency, or describes the procedures or practices of the agency.” (5 M.R.S. § 8002(9)). When the Legislature passes a law such as the Natural Resources Protection Act, the Legislature establishes the scope and general direction of the program. However, the Legislature often directs the appropriate state agency to develop through rulemaking the details needed to implement the law. Rulemaking must be conducted in accordance with state law and follow the public notice and adoption requirements of the MAPA. Rules that have been properly adopted have the force of law and may be enforced by the agency and the courts.

What is the difference between a routine technical and a major substantive rule?

When the Legislature directs an agency to develop rules for a program, it identifies the rule as either routine technical or major substantive. (5 M.R.S. § 8071). Routine technical rules include all rules which have not been designated as major substantive by the Legislature. With few exceptions, routine technical rules are adopted by the DEP Commissioner. Major substantive rules are rules that, in the judgment of the Legislature: (1) require the exercise of significant agency discretion or interpretation in drafting, or (2) because of their subject matter or anticipated impact, are reasonably expected to result in a significant increase in the cost of doing business, a significant reduction in property values, the loss or significant reduction of government benefits or services, the imposition of state mandates on local government, or other serious burdens on the public or local government. (5 M.R.S. § 8071(2)). Major substantive rules are adopted, amended or repealed by the Board, but must be presented to the Legislature for review and approval before they become effective.

How is rulemaking initiated?

The Department may initiate rulemaking for a number of reasons, most commonly because the Legislature has directed the DEP to do so. Other common reasons include: (1) a change in state or federal law, (2) the availability of new data or information on threats to the environment or public health, (3) to improve the effectiveness of an existing rule, and (4) advancements in pollution control technology. The Department may also initiate rulemaking in response to a citizen petition.

Can a member of the public request a rule change?

Yes. State law provides a mechanism for any person to petition an agency for the adoption or modification of any rule. (5 M.R.S. § 8055). Within 60 days of receipt of a petition for rulemaking, the agency must notify the petitioner in writing of its denial, stating the reasons for denial, or the agency must initiate rulemaking proceedings in accordance with the Maine Administrative Procedure Act (MAPA). Petitions to modify a major substantive rule or certain procedural rules over which the Board has authority should be directed to the Board and are considered by the Board at a Board meeting. Other petitions are considered and decided by the Commissioner. If a petition for rulemaking is signed by 150 or more registered Maine voters, the Department must initiate rulemaking by establishing a deadline for submittal of written public comment or by scheduling a public hearing on the petitioner's proposed rule.

What are the steps in the rulemaking process?¹

Rule Development: The development of a rule or rule amendment begins with the identification of a need, frequently by the Legislature through the enactment of a law or by the agency in the conduct of its responsibilities. Once the need and authority for a rule are established, the DEP generally meets with the potentially regulated entities and other interested persons to gather additional information and discuss various options for addressing the issues. DEP staff also consults with the Office of the Attorney General on questions of law. DEP staff then drafts a proposed rule which is presented to the Board (in the case of major substantive rules) or the Commissioner (in the case of routine technical rules) for approval to begin the MAPA process for accepting public comment.

Public Comment: In the case of major substantive rules and certain procedural rules to be decided by the Board, the draft proposed rule is presented to the Board at a regular Board meeting. If the Board determines that the draft proposed rule is ready for formal public comment, it will set a deadline for filing of written comments and may vote to hold a public hearing on the draft rule. Notice of the public hearing (if one is to be held) and the deadline for written public comment is published in accordance with the rulemaking requirements of the MAPA (see 5 M.R.S. §8053). Copies of the draft proposed rule are available on the Department's web page at: www.maine.gov/dep/rules.

Following the public hearing (if one was held) and the close of the comment period, DEP staff reviews and summarizes all comments and data received. The Board may hold a work session with DEP staff at a Board meeting to review comments received on a major substantive rule and discuss key provisions of the proposed rule. DEP staff prepares a response to comments and what is known as a basis statement that explains the reasons for accepting or rejecting any suggested changes to the draft proposed rule. Rules to be decided by the Board are presented to the Board at a Board meeting for consideration and decision.

¹ In addition to the process described here, the APA provides for a consensus-based rule development process. See 5 M.R.S. §8051-B.

Adoption: The transcript of the public hearing, copies of all comments received and responses thereto, the basis statement, and any proposed changes to the rule recommended by DEP staff are provided to the Board for consideration. Notice of the Board meeting at which rules are proposed for adoption by the Board and a copy of the proposed rule are posted on the Board’s web page. The Board is required to accept and consider additional public comment on a proposed rule following the close of the formal rulemaking comment period provided that the comment is directly related to comments received during the formal rulemaking comment period or in response to changes to the proposed rule since the close of the formal comment period. (38 M.R.S. §341-H(3)(C)). The Board provides an opportunity for such comment at the meeting prior to a vote of the Board on the proposed rule.

If the Board determines that the rule it intends to adopt is substantially different from the draft proposed rule which was made available for public comment, the Board must seek additional public comment on the significant changes prior to a final decision on the rule. (5 M.R.S. § 8052(5)(B)). If the proposed rule has been identified by the Legislature as a major substantive rule, the Board may provisionally adopt the rule. A provisionally adopted rule is presented to the Legislature for its review and approval during the next Legislative session. If approved by the Legislature, the rule is then finally adopted by the Board.

The MAPA requires the Department to adopt a rule within 120 days of the close of the public comment period. A rule also must be approved by the Office of the Attorney General as to form and legality within 150 days of the close of the comment period. If either deadline is missed, the rulemaking process must begin anew. After the rule has been approved by the Office of the Attorney General, it must be filed with the Secretary of State in order to become effective.
