To Whom It May Concern:

I am submitting again another public comment regarding the proposed Dallas Plantation telecommunication tower this time in response to the revised plan.

It seems remarkable to me that, after all this time, a new option has been offered, one that is substantially modified from the previous model. As you know, this new tower has been reduced in size by over one third compared to previous structure. In addition, lighting modifications have been made.

One immediately asks why this smaller version was not offered at first. And if the plan has been altered now, why could not there be further modifications? I think this manipulation not only throws into doubt the reliability of the proposal, but also the contentions that no other site is possible and that the effects on neighboring properties would be minimal.

As I wrote previously, the question is not whether improved telecommunication will benefit the region. The question is whether this structure is appropriate to meet the need.

I do not think so.

Thank you.

Dear Ms. Bolstridge;

I would like to submit a comment regarding the newly revised plans for a cell tower in Dallas Plantation. Will you please send me instructions how to do so?

Thank you for your help.

Karen,

We continue to be in favor of any tower in Dallas Plantation to improve service in our area.

Recently, we experienced great difficulty receiving and sending calls to doctors, visiting nurses and physical therapists who needed to provide home care. An immobile patient cannot move locations in a house in order to ,hopefully, have more than one bar of cell service when calls are related to a patient's care at home.

We found it interesting that the first order of business on Sept. 17 at the Sugarloaf Mountain Hotel was all about informing everyone about the "cutting edge" technology that LUPC would have available to connect and reach out to everyone.

No one objected to this motion.

Maybe a cell tower in Dallas Plantation would support LUPC's goal of better communication with everyone,also.

Sincerely,

Dale and Tom Nagle
