Hello Ms. Burke

I think there is something interesting about corridors. You can use google earth and a computer or even a cellphone and maps, in satellite mode. You can start in Moscow and see a corridor. Corridors for the most part are straight. If you zoom in you can see the wires, and poles. It is amazing, really. You can follow a corridor all the way to the Kibby Mountain wind mill farm. You can see the big wind mills. You can even their shadows on the ground. You can see the electric substation very clearly.

Kibby mountain is not far from the Canadian border.

Along the way you can also see where loggers have cut down many acres of forest. Even on a cell phone you can see where they have been busy cutting. If you look close you can see where they pile up logs and put them onto trucks. It is amazing what you can see on google.

The YES people said it was all beautiful virgin forest. When in reality it is a well logged forest.

This comment is probably late.

Sincerely Jim Kimbrell
