To Whom It May Concern:

We would like to express our extreme concern regarding the proposed CMP transmission line through western Maine. We are distraught about industrial development coming to this pristine area of the State of Maine, where people come to recreate to get away from such development. Not only are transmission lines unsightly no matter how they are incorporated into the landscape, like wind turbines they disrupt the surrounding environment with their construction and continuing maintenance, impacting the flora and fauna of the area that we, as native Mainers, have cherished all our lives.

We feel this area should be protected at all costs as a scenic natural resource, vital to Maine's future as a recreational destination, and as an example of what conservation can accomplish....fighting urban sprawl which attempts to consume our vanishing natural areas.

Sincerely,
Kathleen Parrish
