Lithium batteries continue causing fires all over the world. This will not reduce carbon dioxide and other emissions into the atmosphere. I oppose government forcing gasoline or diesel vehicles out of existence.

However I do favor airmotor vehicles, namely, ROTARY WANKEL AIRMOTOR VEHICLES including VTOL AIRCRAFT. This technology requires failsafe carbon-fiber air pressure tanks that hold 30,000 psi air pressure, for 1000-mile range per fill-up of PRESSURIZED AIR. This is the best technology for improvement at present. But it should still not be forced on people. (Look up GM Cadillac Aera concept car, Los Angeles Auto Show, 2010. The same tech can be adapted and used in lower-cost, affordable vehicles. (non-luxury vehicles including VTOL aircraft))

We don't need to plunge our nation into totalitarianism to survive. We need to maintain our rights and freedoms, not take the first exit into infantile Green Fascist "improvement" programs that actually improve nothing.

If electric battery technology is improved, made safe and dependable, I would consider using an electric vehicle, preferably Aptera's concept for solar-electric car with extremely aerodynamic body and high efficiency. "Aptera Motors" is at <https://aptera.us/>

Lithium electric batteries in huge battery packs weighing 1000 pounds or more, are a real danger, a ticking time-firebomb. We need to changed to improved electric batteries if we are going to use such vehicles. Even so, such improved batteries and cars should not be forced on people. The changes should be done by market demand and improved technology, not by "command economy" methods. That's socialism, communism, and totalitarianism, which never works in the long run.
