Dear Air Quality Bureau Cayting,

Solar and wind will never be sufficient for Maine's energy needs and they do as much if not more than fossil fuels to our environment when all factors are considered. Rather than relying on multiple sources of energy spread out over the state, our energy will come from one or two large electric company putting us at risk if there is an issue. Our forests are too valuable a resource to destroy. They control the rain, our climate, and they clean the air. Our fields are needed for hay and crops. Small private fields are what provide most of us who have livestock with hay. Take these away and we can not longer keep animals in small lots where their manure enriches our small organic gardens and allows us to produce healthy food rather than relying on inhumane factory farms. We should never trust one or two big companies such as CMP or a state owned electrical company to provide us with all of our energy needs. Diversity is the key to nature. Diversity, independence, and individual choice founding principles of our Constitution.

Sincerely,

Crystal Robinson
