Having trouble viewing this email?Click here

HealthInfoNet Patient Portal HIE Access Request for Information (RFI)

Do you want to be the FIRST in Maine (and perhaps the nation) to provide patient's access to their statewide HIE record? Does your organization value and seek to improve patient engagement? Then keep reading!

About the Project

As part of the State Innovation Model test grant, HealthInfoNet is seeking one pilot partner to link their organizations patient portal or personal health record (PHR) to the health information exchange (HIE). Once linked HealthInfoNet will use "blue button" technology standards to allow patients to download a continuity of care document (CCD) that gives them a summary of their statewide HIE record. To learn more about the SIM project, visit the State's SIM website.

Why Participate?

As a pilot site, your organization will be the first in the State of Maine to provide patients access to their statewide HIE record. This pilot will be a great opportunity to build upon your current patient engagement campaigns and make you a national leader in the movement to provide patients access to their medical information. To help develop communications strategies for your patients and community, your organization will receive assistance from the HealthInfoNet Consumer Advisory Committee, which includes consumer advocates and representatives from consumer advocacy and education organizations. This will be an especially valuable tool to help your patients and their caregivers in managing their chronic disease and complex care plans across multiple providers.

About the Pilot Selection Process

- There are operational and technical requirements in order to participate, please fill out the survey linked here in order to be considered for the project:
- HealthInfoNet expects to identify the pilot partner by April 1st
- The survey will be open until February 14th
- For more information or questions please email Katelyn Michaud at kmichaud@hinfonet.org

We are excited to hear from you!

HealthInfoNet is an independent, nonprofit organization using health information technology to improve patient care quality and safety. The organization's core service line is the management of a secure computer system, called a health information exchange, for doctors, hospitals and other caregivers to share important health information and improve patient care. The organization also serves as the Maine Regional Extension Center, helping primary care providers adopt and effectively use electronic health records. The organization is based in Portland, Maine and serves healthcare providers and their patients statewide.

Forward this email