Frequently Asked Questions

Question: Can I still get commercial halibut tags even if I did not request them when I applied for my Commercial Fishing License application?

Answer: Yes. You can request commercial halibut tags at any time. Tags can be requested on the Commercial Harvesting License application. However, your license will need to accompany your application and be returned to DMR as you will be issued a new license with the Halibut Endorsement on it.

Question: Does the Department require a training course to catch Atlantic halibut commercially?

Answer: No. The training course is no longer required.

Question: How much do tags cost?

Answer: $1.00 each for recreational and commercial tags.

Question: What is the difference between Maine regulations for commercial vessels with and without a Federal Multispecies (groundfish) Permit?

Answer: Individuals without a federal groundfish permit may land up to 25 Atlantic halibut per year with one vessel. Federal groundfish permit holders may land up to 25 halibut per year for each vessel that has been assigned a groundfish permit. Additional regulations apply to federal groundfish permit holders when fishing in both federal waters and Maine territorial waters. Please contact National Marine Fisheries Service's Sustainable Fisheries Division for additional information.

Question: If I hold a federal groundfish permit, I am limited to one halibut per trip. Do I still have to apply for a DMR landing tag?

Answer: Yes, all halibut landed in Maine must have a DMR landing tag.

Question: Do the groundfish spawning closures in territorial waters apply to halibut?

Answer: No. Halibut are exempt from the groundfish spawning closure. All of Maine's territorial waters are open to halibut fishing during the open halibut season.

Question: Can I set a "gangeon" off one of my lobster traps to fish for halibut?

Answer: Yes, as long as the hooks are 14/0, 15/0 or 16/0 circle hooks.

Question: If I do not fish, do I have to turn in a landings report?

Answer: Yes, you must submit a landings report for each of the two months of Maine's Atlantic halibut season (twice per season) regardless of your fishing activity. If you do not fish, you should check the "did not fish" box on the landings report.

Question: What would I record for my sea time if I haul halibut trawls and lobster traps on the same trip?

Answer: Estimate the time that it took you to haul your halibut trawls and steam time. Do not record the time it took you to haul your lobster gear.
