

A Note to Educators from the Content Creators re: The War on Ukraine

Whenever we consider what lessons we should present to our students, we inevitably turn to what we've learned from our past and what we're learning about our present world. As we, the creators of this series, are working to finish this progression of modules about empathy, resistance, perseverance, and storytelling, we're also witnessing graphic images of violence and hearing terror in the stories of the people of Ukraine.

We are unsure where the story of Ukraine and its people is headed. We are hopeful that the world will not turn its back on these people, but that we will work together to put all of our learning to good use. This means that we need to turn our ideas into actions.

As the author, teacher, and Holocaust survivor Elie Wiesel once said, "Whoever listens to a witness, becomes a witness."
