

Rethinking Remote Education Innovative Summer Coaching Series

RREV (Rethinking Remote Education Ventures) is inviting teams of Educators to join us this summer to develop innovative pilot projects to support remote learning. This is an opportunity for educators to work through the Design Thinking process with experts from several of Maine's Higher Education institutions. Please join us, in partnership with Maine's Innovation Education leaders, to create opportunities for all Maine students to be successful. This project will partner education teams with higher education coaches to collaborate on the development of innovative remote plans over this summer through a series of online and in person (when possible) work sessions over the summer.

Educational teams will develop pilot plans that are eligible for up to $250K in implementation funding.

RREV seeks to expand ideas of what remote learning is. The RREV view of Remote Learning is defined as:

Online learning

Outdoor learning

Multiple Pathways

Extended Learning Opportunities.

Please contact Maine DOE RREV Director Martin Mackey at martin.mackey@maine.gov if you are interested in this opportunity. You can also check out our website for additional information: maine.gov/doe/rrev

We are ready to start working together with your teams.
Please let us know when you are ready!
