The Maine Bureau of Emergency Medical Services is proud to announce the appointment of Dr. Jack Lewis to the position of Associate State Medical Director.

Dr. Lewis is a familiar face to many in our community, having begun his career right here in Maine. After moving here for college, he quickly joined the ranks of our state's clinicians as an EMT. His passion for the field grew as he became a paramedic, serving with distinguished agencies including Delta Ambulance, Redington-Fairview General Hospital, and Biddeford Fire Department.

Building on his deep field experience, Dr. Lewis earned his medical degree from the University of New England College of Osteopathic Medicine before completing his residency at Albany Medical Center. His commitment to advancing emergency care was solidified when he was selected as the inaugural fellow for the Emergency Medical Services program at Maine Medical Center, a testament to his leadership and dedication.

Dr. Lewis's unique journey—from a collegiate EMT to a paramedic on the front lines, and now a physician leader—gives him a comprehensive and invaluable perspective on the future of emergency medical services in our state.

Please join Maine EMS, the Maine Emergency Medical Services Board, and the Medical Direction and Practices Board in warmly welcoming Dr. Jack Lewis. We are confident his experience and vision will be a tremendous asset to our clinicians and the people of Maine.
