A commercial whitewater trip means any commercial effort to transport passengers by means of a whitewater craft on rapidly flowing rivers. "Commercial" under the Maine whitewater statutes means financial compensation or other remuneration. Exception: guides transporting clients by means of a whitewater craft on rapidly flowing rivers while principally engaged in fishing.

A whitewater trip is "commercial" if the person conducting or in charge of the trip collects dues, or fees, or receives any form of compensation for providing whitewater rafting services.

A commercial whitewater outfitter is any person who conducts commercial whitewater rafting trips or who collects dues, or fees, or receives any form of compensation for providing whitewater rafting services or for operating a whitewater rafting organization.

By falsely reporting whitewater rafting trips as noncommercial, illegal outfitters are not only stealing carrying capacity from the private sector but are competing unfairly with licensed outfitters by avoiding use fees, insurance requirements, and other applicable provisions that provide for the safety of the public.

Your signature on this form signifies that your trip is noncommercial. Any misstatement or misrepresentation on this document will subject you to all penalties applicable under 12 MRSA, Section 12913(9)(A)(B).
