

Acceptable Breeding Code Guidance for the Maine Breeding Bird Atlas. This table is for birds observed in appropriate breeding habitat and during appropriate breeding dates and can be used to figure out how to code a particular observation, or also to determine, for a particular species, which codes to keep an eye out for. It is a reference where you can look up the breeding codes that are “Most likely”, “Occasionally”, and “Rarely” observed for each species. Codes in the “Rare” category should be used with caution.

“Most likely” codes: Breeding behaviors most likely to be observed for the species - these codes can be used freely. Add comments in eBird if you are not sure if you are interpreting the codes correctly.

“Occasional” codes: Breeding behaviors less commonly observed for the species, but the codes are valid. Extra care should be taken when using these breeding codes to make sure you are using them correctly. Add comments in eBird if you are not sure you are interpreting the codes correctly.

“Rare” codes (and any codes not listed for a species): Breeding behaviors rarely observed for the species. When using these codes, always add comments in eBird describing exactly what behavior you observed. Species records with these codes will be thoroughly checked to verify that the coding is correct for the species.
