Also, you do not need a REAL ID for domestic airline flights or to enter most federal facilities if you already have an unexpired U.S. passport or passport card, foreign passport, or immigration document such as a permanent resident card or employment authorization card. For more information see <https://www.tsa.gov/travel/security-screening/identification>

Your REAL ID compliant driver's license or identification card, and other federally accepted forms of identification, can be used to board a commercial flight or visit a secure federal building on or after May 7, 2025. Visit <https://www.dhs.gov/real-id> for more REAL ID information.

What is the difference between a REAL ID compliant and a non-compliant driver's license or identification card?

Appearance—A REAL ID compliant driver's license and identification card will be marked with a star symbol on the face of the card. A non-compliant driver's license or identification card will not have the star and will display text indicating that it cannot be used for federal purposes.

Usage – A compliant driver's license or identification card will be accepted for federal identification purposes such as domestic air travel or access to certain federal facilities.

Can I have both a REAL ID driver's license and identification card?

No. REAL ID regulations specify you can only have one REAL ID compliant card - either a driver's license or identification card.

Can I board a plane with the license I have now?

Yes. Current Maine issued driver's licenses and identification cards not marked with a star symbol will remain acceptable as identification for boarding domestic commercial flights until May 6, 2025.

NOTE that if you have any other documents on the TSA list of acceptable documents, including an unexpired U.S. passport or passport card, foreign passport, or immigration document such as a permanent resident card or employment authorization card, you can use those to board a domestic airline flight, without needing to get a REAL ID.

Is a child required to have a REAL ID compliant driver's license or identification card to fly?

The Transportation Security Administration (TSA) does not currently require a child under the age of 18 to have a REAL ID compliant driver's license or identification card when flying with an adult who has a REAL ID compliant driver's license or identification card.

Will a non-REAL ID compliant driver's license or identification card be less secure?

No. Maine BMV is committed to ensuring the security of all driver's licenses and identification cards whether they are REAL ID compliant or not.
