I am Brooke Teller, the 2017 Cumberland County Teacher of the Year and I'm a Chemistry teacher at Casco Bay High School in Portland, Maine. I moved to Maine from CT in 2007 and so came in um when the Maine Learning Results, um the current Maine Learning Results started and um I think it is um long overdue that we revise these standards and look to the Next Gen Science Standards as the next standards that are directing our learners in the state of Maine. Um I think that any organization and looking at the state as an organization um revises their goals and missions and the things they want for their organization um far more often than every 10 years so I think it is high time that we do move towards um Next Gen Science Standards because of the fact that they are asking our students to do the work of scientists not just know the facts of science and so I'll end there.
